For this exercise, I decided to try and make a very simplistic design for the two personas. I made a website so that both users could edit both the size and toppings of the pizzas, as well as edit or enter the names of the pizzas they have created I have made prototypes for a phone, tablet, and a laptop all in figma. In the future, to make the project more efficient and advanced would be to pick up on some more coding skills to help publish it to the web. I could also incorporate some more colors and fancy styles and transitions into the designs to add some flair. Below is the link to the figma website that has all the pages of the user flow, wireframes, prototypes and mockups of the project.
